

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A portable table includes a horizontal member and either one or two support members for use in relatively confined settings. The support member(s) are positioned perpendicular to the horizontal member, proximate the legs of the user, and rest on the floor when the table is 5 in use. The configuration of the table allows the horizontal member to rotate toward and away from the user while the table is in use. The supports are placed parallel to the horizontal member to allow for the table to be transported easily.